

'From Teacher to Manager'

An enjoyable and stimulating two-day workshop for teachers with new management responsibilities

Date: Sat-Sun 13,14 Dec 2008 Time: 9:00 AM - 4:00 PM (Includes Breaks)

Organised by Gradtech Consultants Limited; a key education consultant, providing academic consultancy to worldwide clients and advisory services to international students, including those from the Middle East & North Africa.

Hosted at Al-Refak University, Tripoli - Libya. One of Libya's prominent private academic institutions, offering state-of-the-art facilities, staff with strong dual experience (both academic & industrial) and a resourceful learning environment.

York St John University in the UK is a distinguished institution; renowned for its practical and personalised learning experience, all situated at the heart of Yorkshire, the UK's picturesque county.

This workshop is intended for teachers who are developing a management role. It aims to identify existing experience and skills and focus on how these may be used in a new role.

Workshop Aims

- To raise teachers' awareness of their existing skills in their teaching role.
- To explore how those skills can be used in both teaching and management roles.
- To identify areas for personal professional development.

Workshop Topics

- Skills in Teaching - skills in Managing
- Looking at Yourself - what kind of a manager will you be?
- Managing People, Managing Change, Managing Yourself.

Marion Yates

Marion Yates is principal lecturer and Head of the International Centre at York St John University in the UK. She worked in her current management role for over 11 years and previously combined teaching, management of language training and consultancy for a number of Government organisations in the UK and overseas.

Place: Al-Refak University, Al Jumhoria St., Al-Dhahra, Tripoli

For more info please contact:

Dr Ali Ghannawi 091 365 3547
Dr Ahmed Subhi 091 483 4966

www.gradtech.co.uk